Jakarta Troops Near Sumatra Rebel HQ

SINGAPORE, Wednesday (UPI). — Indonesian central government forces staging a two-way drive against the rebels in Central Sumatra, reported tonight they had reached to within 70 air miles of the insurgent headquarters at Padang.

One Government column pushed off from recently-captured Rengat in the heart of the Stawas oilfields, and the other from Pakan Bahru in the Calteks oilfields. Stawas and Calteks are American-owned.

Lt.-Col. Kharodini Nasution, loyalist Commander in Central Sumatra, said 20 rebels were killed and 200 captured in the Tuhui fighting.

Ex-Mufti's Kinsman Intrigues in Riadh

BY JESSE ZEL LURIE, Jerusalem Post Correspondent
NEW YORK, Wednesday. — The Rasputin of King Saud's palace, the ex-Mufti of Hussein, who was trained in the tutelage of his kinsman, the ex-Mufti of Jerusalem, Amin al-Husseini.

The Cairo press accuses Jamal of organizing the alleged Nasser murder plot, and charges him with a variety of acts of corruption, including trafficking in slave girls.

The Cairo press accuses Jamal of organizing the alleged Nasser murder plot, and charges him with a variety of acts of corruption, including trafficking in slave girls.

The Crown Prince Faisal's first reported decree after assuming some of Saud's powers解除了侯赛因的职位，而侯赛因的其他巴勒斯坦顾问从内阁会议中被排除在外。

He said the high cost of living would be cut by 50 per cent after customs and trade restrictions with Iraq had been removed. Faisal said any economic aid which Jordan had been receiving would not be affected by the move. Military aid would also probably continue.

He estimated that the union's first budget would amount to about $450,000, of which Jordan would probably contribute 20 per cent. There would be no deficit in the Jordan budget in future, because revenue would cover expenses when the Jordan army was merged with the union.

The President of the outlawed Syrian National Socialist Party arrived in Amman yesterday and informed U.N. officers who were moving in the vicinity during the afternoon, and his car was stopped by the Jordanian police.

Reuter reported from Damascu that the Syrian government has been receiving financial aid from Saudi Arabia.

The State Department is now comforting itself with the assumption that Faisal is not really anti-American, pointing to his stay here for medical treatment, and that he has six sons being educated in the U.S.

Their theory is that King Saud sincerely wants to make peace with Nasser and Faisal is the best man to do it.

The Dulles statement that Faisal only resumed his former posts ignores the fact that the Crown Prince no longer needs Saud's approval for decree, thus being virtually the country's ruler.

CAIRO DISCREET

CAIRO, Wednesday (UPI). — Egyptian officials have made no comment yet on Saud's sudden decision to assume more key government posts to Prince Faisal, probably because of lack of full reports from Saudi Arabia.

Some observers in Cairo thought it possible that Nasser himself might fly to Riad to help heal the breach. They recalled that before the crisis Nasser himself suggested visiting Saudi Arabia.

A Saudi Embassy official here last night expressed the hope that the new development would improve relations between his country and the U.A.R.

Saudi to Join UAR, Syrian Paper Predicts

BEIRUT, Wednesday (UPI). — A Syrian newspaper predicted today that Saudi Arabia would join the United Arab Republic in federal union in April or the next year.

The newspaper "Al-Rai Al-Am" said information received also "reveals that in the future there will be no cooperation between the Saudi Kingdom and the Arab Federation."

Abdul Arsalan, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, arrived in Cairo unexpectedly yesterday. Cairo Radio reported that he carried a special message from President Gamal Nasser.

El-Atrash, Minister of Foreign Affairs, said he had no quarrel with Ghada, which could operate shipping business with any country other than Israel and Arab ports.

He "regretted" that Ghada should be affected by the war, but added that under the state of war between the U.A.R. and Israel is called off and their dispute amicably settled, a ship connected with Israel will be allowed to call at any Arab port.

MEIR IN DAKAR

DAKAR, Wednesday (INA). — Foreign Minister Golda Meir arrived here last night, concluding a 30-day West African tour with a two-day visit. She is scheduled to be in Paris on Friday before returning to Israel on Saturday evening.

Third U.S. Satellite Placed In Space Orbit by Jupiter Rocket

Like: Soviets to See A-Test

WASHINGTON, Wednesday (UPI). — The President told a press conference today that the U.S. will invite a number of scientists, including Russians, to witness a nuclear test explosion in the Pacific this summer.

He added that the radioactive fallout from this blast would be drastically reduced.

open the door to wider negotiations with the Soviet Union.

The test would demonstrate, he said, "the progress our scientists are achieving in reducing radioactive fallout from nuclear explosions."

The U.S. would be asked to select a group of scientific observers from the U.S. Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation.

He said this group included representatives of the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, U.S., Britain, Canada and a few others whom he did not name.

American and foreign correspondents would also be invited.

Mr. Eisenhower said he could not predict whether Russia would accept an invitation to the tests.

Cannons Predict

Asked whether the U.S. had information to support speculation that Russia might unilaterally end atomic tests and stop producing nuclear weapons, the President said that by saying these things the Russians hoped to convince the world they really wanted peace and a negotiated agreement that was sound and favourable to both sides.

The U.S. itself was handicapped by its attempts to observe truth. That was why the Soviet Union connected it with the elimination of weapon manufacture.

Asked whether he meant there was no truth to a report the U.S. might consider separating the test ban from the production "cut-off," Mr. Eisenhower said it would be unwise to take a rigid position where any reliable agreement would seem to be no disarmament accord.

The spokesman alleged "renewed Israeli attacks" on Syria and "continued U.S. activities in the lands of the demilitarized zone," and said the U.A.R. has filed two "urgent complaints" with the Mixed Armistice Commission. He asserted that Israel soldiers and workers started a drive against operations on the morning of U.S. intervention."

TRACING BORDER

BEERSHEBA, Wednesday (UPI). — Officers of the U.N. Truce Supervision Organization, the Israel Army and Jordan Army, today revisited the spot where Sagan-Mishne Yaron Feingold was murdered on Monday, when an armoured patrol was fired on while intercepting a group of Jordan shepherds who had crossed into their flock.

The frontier is not clearly marked in this region and the investigating team is currently engaged in tracing the border line, which will take about two to three days.

Bizri Said Prevented From Leaving Egypt

"The Egyptian authorities this week prevented Gen. Afif Bizri, who quit his post as the U.A.R.'s First Army Commander, from boarding a plane which was due to leave for Syria. Ramallah Radio claimed this night.

It said that the Egyptian authorities have "allowed" Bizri's family to join him in Cairo.

Yesterday, Baghdad Radio said that Bizri had been appointed as the U.A.R.'s Ambassador to China, although there was no confirmation of this.

Mr. Abdul Hamid Sarraj, ex-intelligence chief of the Syrian Army and now Minister of the Interior in Syria, yesterday warned Syrians that they will be liable to fines of L50,000 and prison terms of three years, if the funds of dissolved political parties are not turned in to the Government in one week's time, the Arab News Agency reported from Damascus.

Bonn Chamber Passes First Step To Equip Army with A-Arms

BONN, Wednesday (UPI). — The West German Parliament last night approved a Christian Democratic motion asking for the West German Army to be equipped with the most modern weapons — failing general disarmament — to enable it to meet NATO commitments.

Voting was 274-165 by a show of hands. There were 26 abstentions. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer thus won the right to equip West German forces with atomic weapons should there be no disarmament accord.

The vote came at the end of one of the most bitter parliamentary debates in West Germany since World War II. Dr. Adenauer, facing one of the biggest tests since he took office in 1949, spoke four times during the four days of debate. He stressed that West Germany must accept atomic arms if NATO wants it that way, or it would mean the collapse of the North Atlantic Alliance.

Emergency' Motion

Shortly before the vote, the Free Democrats introduced a motion for creation of a national emergency Government. The Socialists, allied with the Free Democrats in opposition to Dr. Adenauer's Christian Democrats, called for a national referendum on the atomic issue.

The two motions were, in effect, demands for expressions of confidence in the Adenauer government. A few hours before the vote, 2,000 steel workers staged a wildcat strike in Kassel in protest against giving German soldiers nuclear weapons.

The protest coincided with a warning telegram to Parliament from representatives of 18,000 North German iron and steel workers.

Same Size as Explorer I

WASHINGTON, Wednesday. — The U.S. placed its third earth satellite in orbit today, when the Army's Jupiter-C rocket, carrying Explorer III, was fired at Cape Canaveral, Florida, the Defense Department announced today.

The satellite, 90 inches long and six inches in diameter and weighing 31 lbs., is twin to Explorer I launched by the Army on January 31.

Actually it was the third firing of the Jupiter missile. On March 5, a Jupiter failed to place a "mystery" in orbit because the fourth stage carrier rocket did not ignite.

The U.S. now has three satellites circling the earth in company with Russia's Sputnik II. The second of the American satellites is the little grapefruit-sized Vanguard I, launched by the Navy on March 17.

The exact altitude of the orbit of Explorer III was not immediately disclosed, but it is known to be more than 200 miles above the earth. The Jupiter-C missile reached orbital velocity of slightly more than 18,000 miles an hour seven and a half minutes after it left the ground.

Vanishes into Clouds

The rocket was fired at 17:38 GMT (1:38 p.m. Israel time). The 70-foot white rocket streaked into a layer of clouds, where it vanished after 20 seconds. Its roar was heard for another few seconds, and then faded as it sped on towards space.

The U.S. itself was handicapped by its attempts to observe truth. That was why the Soviet Union connected it with the elimination of weapon manufacture.

The U.N. has been questioned by Soviet and foreign newsmen at a conference in the Central House of Journalists.

Observers in Western capitals, meanwhile, saw the arrival of Prime Minister Nikolai Bulganin from the dinner given for the Soviet Army General last night, which was attended by top Soviet leaders, as a sign that the Premier's star may be fading.

They said it was possible that Marshal Bulganin may be voted out of office by the end of the newly-elected Supreme Soviet's session, which begins tomorrow.

TOWNSEND VISITS PRINCESS MARGARET

LONDON, Wednesday (UPI). — Peter Townsend arrived yesterday after an 18-month global trip and immediately paid a visit to Princess Margaret.

He dropped in on Clarence House in the afternoon and had tea with the Princess.

The new satellite, similar to the others, carries two tiny radio transmitters. It was fired while other earth satellites were some distance away in their orbits so there would be no radio interference.

LAW REPORT

The Jerusalem Post
March 27, 1958

In the Supreme Court Sitting As Court Of Criminal Appeal Before the Deputy President (Justice Chaskin), Justices Sussman and Landau 1. Aharon Werner, 2. Ya'akov Haroubi, v. The Attorney General and 3. Meir Massudi, 4. Aharon Werner, 3. Ya'akov Haroubi (Official's Son Sent to Prison to Serve Longer Sentence)

The Supreme Court dismissed one appeal and allowed another against a verdict of the Haifa District Court, delivered on August 8, 1957 (in C.C. 172/57).

Chief Justice Sussman and Justice Landau, the former pointing out that he could see no reason whatever for regarding Mr. Cohen as an accessory after the fact since, in accordance with the definition in section 26(1) of the Criminal Code Ordinance, it must be the intention of the accused to commit the offence and any act unaccompanied by such an intention, while incidentally serving to help the accused escape punishment, cannot implants the person committing the act.

From the evidence, Justice Chaskin concluded, it would appear that Mr. Cohen's intention was to obtain his release from prison and not to become involved and not to implicate the accused from punishment.

Having dismissed Werner's and Massudi's appeal, the court next considered the Attorney General's appeal against the sentence imposed on all three accused. He did not threaten to divorce the police was to obtain his release from prison and not to become involved and not to implicate the accused from punishment.

Mr. Cohen had informed him from returning on the accused and he had released from prison and the police released him from execution, resolved about the shed of which he was in charge, until after they were arrested.

Werner and Massudi argued that the District Court

had, in its opinion,

been guilty of an error of law.

The Attorney General appealed against the leniency of the sentence imposed on all three men.

Mr. Toloidi appeared for

Yosef, Mr. Tsvi Cohen for

Werner, Mr. Dorev for

Massudi and Mr. Landau, Deputy State Attorney, for the Attorney General.

Judgment

Justice Landau, who delivered the main judgment of the Supreme Court, held that, in the light of the facts, the District Court had been justified in believing the testimony of the Cohen's, and then went on to consider whether Cohen had been an accessory.

The Attorney General appealed against the leniency of the sentence imposed on all three men.

Mr. Toloidi appeared for

Yosef, Mr. Tsvi Cohen for

Werner, Mr. Dorev for

Massudi and Mr. Landau, Deputy State Attorney, for the Attorney General.

Justice Landau, who delivered the main judgment of the Supreme Court, held that, in the light of the facts, the District Court had been justified in believing the testimony of the Cohen's, and then went on to consider whether Cohen had been an accessory.

From an objective point of view, he said, Cohen had committed certain acts which might have helped the accused to carry out their plan, but he had not done so with any criminal intention. On the contrary, he had hoped all the time to be able to dislodge the accused from carrying out their plan, and had even tried to prevent them from doing so. As to the passive assistance which he had lent them by not divulging their conspiracy to his superiors, he did not make him a party to the offence, nor was it an offence under section 26 of the Criminal Code Ordinance, since that section makes it a crime to refrain from preventing a person from committing a felony and all the offences with which the accused had been charged were only misdemeanours. Cohen had, therefore, only been tainted to the extent of having been "mixed-up" in an offence, but had not been an accessory.

Turning next to the question of whether Mrs. Cohen had been an accessory after the fact, Justice Landau pointed out that, in accordance with the principles established in England, the test of an accessory after the fact does not require corroborative, but there is no such thing as an accessory after the fact in the case of misdemeanours.

In accordance with legal law, however, he continued, a person may be an accessory after the fact in the case of misdemeanours too, but it would appear that in order to fit this person to this description the person who assists an offence to be committed, must do so directly. It was doubtful, therefore, whether the fact that Mrs. Cohen had persuaded her husband not to inform against the accused would make her an accessory after the fact.

That Extra Something

But even if it were to be presumed that she had been an accessory, and that her testimony therefore required confirmation, her evidence could, in the absence of corroborative, at least in part, supply that "something additional" required to strengthen the evidence of her husband, who was "mixed-up" in an offence. It had already been held, Justice Landau continued, that the evidence of someone who was mixed-up in an accident, which was translated into many languages.

8 Nisan, 5718-7 Hanadiv, 1958

BY any standards, the amended Law of Limitations now being debated in the Knesset is generous to the tenant-farmer. It permits a man or his family to have occupied and worked a piece of land continuously for a period of 15 years, they are entitled to a legal claim to the land as their property. In all cases where the land has been occupied for a period of at least ten years, and the family has made its living off it, they will be permitted to remain and lease either the whole or part of the property or,
in some cases, other land
in the same area. In no case, whatever the legal position, will any family
be summarily dispossessed from land it has been working for a long period.

Nevertheless this law
did not reach the Statute Book without difficulties.
Up to now, the law with respect to title-less land was Ottoman law, which
in this particular respect was more generous than that of any other code, for it provided that a piece of land should become the property of the man who occupied it after ten years
only, even though it had previously belonged to someone else, and that after this period the previous owner could not dispossess the new occupant.

If it was decided to substitute an Israel law for this part of the Ottoman Code, it was in order to limit, if not to eliminate,
the effects of an anomaly concerning a large part of the agricultural land in Galilee. This area, which still has much room for additional farming population, was sparsely inhabited until the middle years of World War II, much of the land lying fallow. At that time, there was an urgent need for increased production of foodstuffs
for the population, to replace supplies needed by troops and to save precious shipping space. Prices for all farm products rocketed,
and a steady movement
began of Arab farmers
from other areas to Galilee, where they settled on State domain. The British Administration was much more concerned with the increase of production than the future ownership of the State domain, and no check was kept of the areas occupied by each migrant. In 1948 and the months following the establishment of the State Galilee was comparatively quiet, and again Arab farmers from other areas moved there and began to plough new lands.

As the State continued
with the land register for Galilee, begun by the British administration and already complete for other areas, it became clear that the process of obtaining verbal evidence from village elders concerning the ownership of land in the area could not be completed by 1958—and the tenant claimants had every interest in delaying the process
—after which date title could be claimed to the land under Ottoman law.
As in some cases single farmers have laid claim to several thousand dunams, which they are unable to work, acceptance of the present position would prevent the development of the area for many years to come. Israel is too poor in usable agricultural land to permit these domains to pass into private ownership without control as to economic use.

It is fortunate, in this connection, that an aerial survey of the area was made in 1943, which shows clearly which areas were then cultivated and can serve as a basis for ownership under the 15-year provision. An earlier proposal had foreseen a much longer period of tenancy still, with up to 50 years required as the condition for ownership, but this was rejected as unworkable for lack of documentary evidence. The present compromise will at the same time secure more land in Galilee for additional settlement and protect present farmers against eviction, and has been accepted by all parties except the Communists.

Adenauer's Nuclear Bombshell

By SEBASTIAN HAFFNER

BONN (OFTEN).—The decision of the West German Government, which has now proclaimed its intention to accept nuclear weapons for its armed forces, does not in itself come as a great surprise. Official hints that the Adenauer Government would sooner or later switch from conventional to nuclear rearmament unless a general agreement came about first, have been rapidly dropped during the last few weeks. What is surprising and a little puzzling is the timing and manner of the announcement.

Up to now, the official attitude in Bonn has been that the problem was not topical and would not become so for another year to two. This was quite plausible and seemed still valid to hold good. The West German armed forces are still in a relatively early phase of their organization and training and will certainly not be in a position to handle nuclear weapons effectively for at least another year. Moreover, the question whether or not nuclear weapons should go outside the circle of the three Powers which have developed them through their own efforts is still quite undecided in the capitals concerned, and the possibilities of stopping or freezing the nuclear arms race are still under active study internationally. In these circumstances, it seems that the West Germans are speaking somewhat out of turn.

The question is reinforced by the manner in which the decision was made public: out of the blue, in a Buntestag (Lower House) debate, which had ostensibly as its subject foreign affairs. And it was clear that the side which would naturally dominate a foreign affairs debate at this moment, such as the various proposals for the agenda of a summit meeting in Europe, was in particular the possibility of disengagement. Europe which are now under discussion everywhere, making such proposals receive the cause of German reunification.

It appears that Dr. Adenauer was anxious to avoid a debate in the Buntestag, as well as to create new difficulties to disengage.

Jewishness the Issue

Lamherav (Abud Ha'ava) warns that the "Jewish Consciousness" curriculum in State schools will not serve its purpose because it is a poor and sweetly sentimental substitute that will not enrich Jewish-Israeli culture or help to stabilize present-day Jewish life.

Hatzevot (World Mizrahi) calls upon the Government to rein in the Ahud Ha'Avoda Minister of Interior after his declaration that "the question of nationality is not the authority of the Rabbinate and the Halakha." The Minister of Interior must not serve as a vehicle for the destructive opinions cherished by Mr. Bar-Yehuda, who would like to pit his own people against the aged concepts of Judaism.

Observing that Mapai has been forced to back down on the issue of a radio journal, Herzl calls on the latter to take heart and not be intimidated: if they insist enough, Mapai's leader will prove as compliant in domestic affairs as he is on foreign issues.

Al Hamizrahi (Mapam) writes that the railway workers committee elections in the north have led the Mapai stalwarts in Haifa to new heights of aggression and pressure upon the voters. If Mapai succeeds along this line it will be able to talk itself and elect itself as will Mapam, and perhaps also the other parties in the Histadrut. The mapai must not serve as a vehicle for the British predictions of chaos and disorder upon this warning.

Ha'aretz (non-party) notes a great deal of dissatisfaction among our qualified engineers and architects with regard to the new law governing admission to the profession, as far as the feel that it still does not specify clearly who is qualified and who is not.

It is the opinion of the author that the new law will be a fitting complement to this warning.
